LOVE WALKED IN

THE first day that Ken came to work for the Tanner law firm was fortunately a busy one for me. Otherwise I might have been tempted to walk over to my flirtatious co-worker, Kay, and stopped her from fluttering her long eyelashes in Ken's direction. Kay was an outrageous flirt, and any handsome newcomer to the firm soon found himself marked as her personal project.

I had nothing but contempt for the cunning game she played. In the past I had been coldly frank to point out to her that the young fellows who came in as summer part-timers were struggling boys hoping to earn a few dollars against the coming year's law school tuition. She had no right to play them for a free round of lunches. And what was worse she managed to have them date her and take her on the rounds of expensive night clubs with never a remorseful thought in that head of hers.

"You're so busy watching pennies," said Kay sarcastically, "that you'll wind up married to a miser."

Ken was more than fair game by her standards. His tall, rangy figure was enough to stir any girl's dreams of the perfect guy to be seen around town with. And his face was interesting, not just simple good looks, but a cut to the features that mirrored the interesting personality underneath. I stopped right there.

"You better take it easy, Mara," I warned myself. "Your interest in this lad is beyond that of the good samaritan who doesn't like to see a guy taken advantage of. Your heart is budding with jealousy, and you'd better watch that round good-natured face of yours before any tell-tale blushes give you away."

I busied myself in the accounting books until at the end of the day I had set such a hectic pace for myself that I looked worn as an old shoe, hardly the type Ken or any other man would look at twice.

At closing time I hurried to the washroom, holding my carbon-smudged nose high in the air, oblivious to everything around me. That included Ken, so it was highly embarrassing that I didn't notice him until I literally fell over him. He was leaning over Kay's desk fixing a typewriter ribbon. His leg was stretched into the aisle, and my clumsy feet smacked into it.

I sprawled forward, and with the grace of a football receiver he caught me before I went down. The disconcerting strength of those arms wrapped around me caught me with a Zing! I was so flustered that I lost some of my red-haired temper on the spot.

"Let me go, you . . . you and your big feet!"

Kay's girlish laughter rippled through the air.

Ken took his arms away, and my head stopped going in circles.

"I'm really sorry I got in your way," Ken apologized in a voice as mellow as a drum beat. "I don't think we've met, by the way. I'm Ken . . ."

"Mara," I replied, just barely civil at this point. We shook hands, and I continued on my way as quickly as possible.

Undoubtedly Kay had maneuvered a date. That was on schedule for her, and nothing to be surprised at. When I got to the elevator at closing time the two of them were standing there.

"Won't you join us for coffee?" Ken asked pleasantly.

I was about to refuse when I saw Kay's eyes light up with a warning signal. She shook her head significantly, and that's when I decided to stop her little game. Obviously, I couldn't have Ken for myself; I couldn't compete with Kay's attractiveness, but I didn't have to help her schemes.

"I'd love nothing better," I answered sweetly.

Kay's face fell, and my spirits soared.

As we sat together at a small table, Ken and I monopolized the conversation. Kay was lost if she couldn't roll her eyes or cast an artificial smile into the eyes of a male beholder. If she didn't shine solo as the main attraction, her manhunting searchlights went dim.

When the cigarette girl approached our table, Kay saw her chance. The girl carried a large tray and nestled onto it was a display of cuddly stuffed animals. An aristocratic poodle caught Kay's eye, and she

Or can you blame the girl who confesses, "I hate to go out with that fellow who has blackheads." But you—are YOUR ears burning?

pounced.

"Isn't it darling!" she cooed. "I just can't resist it, Ken."

I watched carefully as Ken caught the bait . . . the promising flutter of Kay's eyes, the full, deliberate pursing of her heart-shaped mouth.

"You should wait for payday, Kay, before you spend your money," I said very pointedly.

Kay's eyes narrowed, but she wasn't easily stopped.

"It's true. I'm flat broke," she announced coyly.

"Don't be silly," said Ken affably. "I'll be glad to . . ."

"No you won't!" I replied sternly. I knew full well that he would never be paid back.

I opened my purse and deliberately thrust some bills into Kay's hand.

"You owe it to me," I told her.

Gingerly Kay returned the poodle to the tray.

"Never mind," she said.

When it came time to leave, Ken took the check.

"In case you don't know it, Ken," I invented quickly, "we have a rule around here that when we go out with office help, it's strictly dutch. Isn't that right, Kay? And by the way, Ken, as a word of advice, Kay feels very strongly on that subject. The fellows in the office who take her out know that she insists on paying her own way. She feels that the working boy deserves a break. You mustn't offend her by picking up the check!"

Ken seemed a little bewildered, but he laughed understandingly.

"A woman's protection league for the struggling young man. That's a pretty fair gimmick," he admitted.

For the rest of the summer that Ken worked with our outfit, Kay showed a surprising lack of interest in him. I could hardly believe it when Ken's last day on the job rolled around. We had spent long, wonderful hours together on so many office projects. He was due to finish his last year at law school, and I probably would never see him again.

We said a warm, but businesslike good-bye and I trudged home to my small apartment in a deep, blue mood. It was my own fault for setting the pattern. Kay didn't have a chance, but I didn't either. A fellow with Ken's pride didn't ask a girl for a date without paying both ways. I had put the rules to him . . . strictly business. He saw no one outside the office on a personal basis.

When the telephone rang and Ken's voice tingled in my ear through the receiver, I was surprised.

"Now that the office association is at an end, Mara, I hope you might want to celebrate something else with me."

I said Yes, no questions asked, as fast as possible. Two minutes later the bell rang and Ken walked in.

"I called from downstairs," he confessed sheepishly.

I felt a lump in my throat. I couldn't show him what I felt about him, but the sight of him staring down at me with those warm, wonderful eyes almost brought tears. It was such a hopeless situation! He couldn't possibly be interested in a Plain Jane like me!

Then, suddenly his arms reached out and I fell into them, only it was far different than that first accidental collision. He cradled me against him, and his lips brushed mine with tender feeling.

"I love you," he murmured. "Those weeks in the office of having to watch myself and not interfere with those office standards of yours practically drove me crazy."

"It was all my fault," I said blissfully.

"You and dad see too much of one another," said Ken. "You've got the same ideas about not throwing out money . . . that was the first thing that opened my eyes to what a sweet, perfect person you are. Only next year when I come back into the firm you'll have to stop worrying about Kay and the part-time personnel. You'll be budgeting our household accounts, young woman, and you'll be much too busy to have time for anything else."

"That will be a pleasure, but how do I know your father . . ."

"Come out to dinner with me and I'll brief you."

I took Ken's arm and walked outside with him. The limousine at the curb with the Tanner seal stunned me, but I began to catch on.

"Let it be known now that the real name is Ken Tanner, and don't hold it against me. Dad didn't want the office force to give me the kid-glove treatment under the family name. I'm ready to struggle through a lifetime of happiness with you if you're willing."

We sealed it with a kiss. It was the best bargain I ever made.

Put New FUN Into Your Life!

START PLAYING REAL MUSIC RIGHT AWAY!

Play the Piano, Accordion, Guitar — Or ANY Instrument You Choose. Learn Faster, and for Less Cost, Than You Ever Thought Possible.

IMAGINE THE THRILL when someone at the party turns to you and says, "Please play for us!" Yes, when you can play music a whole new world opens up for you . . . of self-confidence . . . new friends . . . relaxation . . . popularity . . . making extra money . . . and the personal satisfaction that comes with being able to play any kind of music — any time you wish!

Best of all, there is a famous home-study course that will start you playing right away, beginning with delightful little pieces. And for far less cost than you think — without having to practice boring scales and tedious exercises!

How is all this possible?

The answer lies in the words of the renowned pianist, Ignace Jan Paderewski. "Music students actually teach themselves," he said. "A teacher can only show them what to do."

Using this principle, the U. S. School of Music successfully teaches through a fascinating home-study course. It shows you how in simple, step-by-step pictured directions — and you teach yourself!

Anyone Can Learn to Play

You need no special "talent," no previous training. Yet you can quickly be playing music everybody loves — even if you don't know a single note now!

Your earliest lessons include lovely popular songs . . . waltzes . . . folk songs, etc. And (since you play from real notes) you'll soon be reaching for any kind of music! Latest hit songs . . . classics . . . hymns — anything you like, anything your friends ask you to play. What's more, others in your family can learn right along with you, if you wish. And the cost for everything (including valuable sheet music) is astonishingly small. Yes, only a matter of pennies for each lesson!

Get Started Now. Mail Coupon Today!

The thrill of playing music is waiting for you NOW! Get started by mailing the coupon for valuable Free Book which shows how easy and fascinating our course is. The book will be sent immediately. There is no obligation — and no salesman will call. Mail coupon at once!

THOUSANDS NOW PLAYING WHO NEVER THOUGHT THEY COULD!

"Enjoyed your piano Course, which could not be duplicated in quality or price from a teacher."
— Mrs. Jay Bartoshi, Massapequa, N.Y.

"I learned more in three months with you than in two years by myself. I have played for dances, and am now studying a couple of concertos."
— Ivan W. Dayley, Lisco, Nebr.

"Can't tell you how pleased I am . . . the lessons are very simple and clear, easy to understand."
— Mrs. R. Robertson, Fort Bragg, N.C.

"I recommend the U. S. School of Music, and am very glad for its help and cooperation."
— Albert Bigole, E. Greenville, Pa.

"Didn't know a sharp from a flat, but now play for friends, Sunday School, and Church."
— Miss D. McGee, DeValls Bluff, Ark.
